THE HAMILTON HOUSE.—This establishment is now The period of the reception of company. It has been thoroughly renovated and furnished anew, upon a scale of liberality commensurate with the demands of the public. The department of the cuisins has been placed under the charge of a capable and experienced artist, who will lack no supplies that the markets can afford. To those macquainted with the location of the Hamilton House, it is only necessary to say, that it is situated at the ocean entrance to the Narrows, from eight to ten miles from the city, on the bigh western bluff of Long Island, commanding a noble view of the lower bay and the Atlantic and landward, the highly cultivated and fertile shores of Stazen and Long Island, and the harbor of New York. Nothing can exceed the beauty of the prospect in every direction. The salurious art at all periods of the day, the east access by stage and steamboat, and the minded life and retirement of the spot, render this establishment second to none within a hundred niles of New York. The apartments are commodious and airy, and their accommodations in wasked contrast with those of similar houses heretofore in the vicinity of the city. The rides in the neighborhood, the fishing grounds, billiard rooms, ten-pin alieys, and other accessories of recreasion, leave little, it is be lived, to be wished for by any quest.

BATH HOUSE, LONG ISLAND.—This long and well known boarding and sea bathing establishment, having recently undergone numerous improvements, among which is the crection of several elegant summer hosses upon the margin of the ocean, is now open for the reception of company during the season. The great extent of private beach on this shore—the perfect security in bathing, even for ladies and children, (the bathing houses being within a stone's throw of the mansion.)—the pleasant rides in the surrounding country—the excellent lishing grounds and other sources of healthful recreation and amusement—the beautiful view of the Atl naic ocean and the lower bay, almost constantly entivened by numerous vessels arriving or outward bound, render this situation in every respect unsequalted by any in the vicinity. Its accommodations are ample, the rooms airy and the temperature, even in the warmest days of summer, anything but oppressive. The convenience of communication and distance, (being but nine miles from Brooklyn,) the access by stages at hours accommodated to business render it pseudiarly well adapted as a residence for gentlemen of busic as in New York.

Court for the Correction of Errors.

Court for the Correction of Errors.

The Lieutenant Governor in the Chair.

Jour 2.—Decision on the Mandamuz.—It having been announced that a decision would be rendered in relation to the Sixth Ward election, and the appointment of clerks for the two boards, an immense throug assembled in efforts to witness the proceedings, but a small proportion of whom, it may be readily supposed, could obtain admittance. There are about 1500 menholdingsheir situations from the City Government, nearly 250 of whom had already been removed, and others appointed in their places. On this decision rested the validity of the prodecure, and the hopes and fears of those immediately interested were strikingly portrayed in the anxiety marked in their respective countenances.

The Chancellor opened the ball by reading a written opinion. He considered the subject as possessing many points of doubt, and he would not be surprised to witness a difference of opinion among the members. He called upon them to decide without political hias, and from the records presented to them from the Court below. He then proceeded to examine the facts in the case. As to Mr. Orolius, the Chancellor considered that his having been elected is sufficient title to his taking possession of his seat. It is a rule of law that a person having a sufficient number of votes is entitled to his office notwathstanding a mistake on the part of the returning officer. The want of the first district return was no good reason why the canvassers of the between Governors Clinton and Jay. The Ward canvassers of the 6th should have sent it back, had it not been correct. This is in conformity with the mode pursued by the State canvassers, and was illustrated in the election between Governors Clinton and Jay. The turn from the other three districts. The Board of Aldermen could have sent it back, had it not been correct. This is in conformity with the mode pursued by the State canvassers, and was illustrated in the election between Governors Clinton and Jay. The turn from the other t in the election between Governors Cibiton and Jay. The Ward canvassers of the 6th should have made up their return from the materials presented to them, as was done by the canvassers of the 12th, who, however, erred in a per tion of their duty, which the Chancellor pointed out. The return, so far as possible, was made, and authorized the ministerial officer to administer the oath. I cannot agree, however, with the Suprame Court, that the Recorder had a right to administer the oath previous to the meeting of the board. The Montgomery charter pointed out a particular mode, which was continued in the revised charter. Even if the Mayor and Clerk refused, I do not consider that the swearing in by the Recorder before such refusal, is yaild. Croius should have waited, and had the Recorder present, ready to act in the event of the other declining. Still, having been elected, and entered upon the duties of his office, he is alderman de facto and could only be removed by a writ of que warrante, and his acts are valid as regards thirt parties. Mr. Taylor showed good prima facie evidence to the Mayor of his appointment, and was entitled to be sworn in. In respect to Mr. Shaler, I have come to the conclusion that his asserted right to held over cannot be sastained by the revised charter. That instrument says the members shall be elected for one year, and that the election shall be annually. I can see no good reason for his holding over. It was intended to assimilate the legislature of the city to that of the State. I therefore conclude he had no right to held over the theorem of the control of the city to that of the State. I therefore conclude he had no right to held over the same way. I do not say that power does not exist in the Common Council, but that does not deprive the Supreme Court of a right to look into the circumstances. The relators are only obliged to make our a prima facie case to produce a mandamus. The plaintiff in error seems to have acted on the erroneous opinion that he must have legal evidence of the el erroneous opinion that he must have legal evidence of the election. He was wrong. For the reasons presented I will vote in affirmance of the Court below on all the cases.

General Root then rose. He said they were called upon to avoid being influenced by party considerations, and this case, more than any other in his recollection, calls upon the members firmly to do their duty. There is an axiom that where parties are equally divided, judges should decide. The Government of Naw York is in theory a democratic one, the laws of which are to be enacted by the people and to be carried on by the people. The executive are but its agents. The judges are made independent of the people arise to change their opinions, but fearlessly to enforce the laws that the people have enacted. This court is constituted somewhat different, where in the last resort the people should have their own tribunal in which to correct the errors of those independent judges. In that way we are bound to carry out the people's will as they have shown it in their social compacts. If the people's rights have been trenched upon, this Court should correct it—judge between the people on one side, and their tyrants on the other. Judges should benignly act. As a democrat yesterday, to-day, and forever, I feel bound to protect the people's rights. They have no way to show their views but through the ballet boxes. That is the index through which it is expressed. In the 6th Ward it was proved clearly that Crolius was elected. Would you have that election defeated—counteracted by technical rules and technical forms? I approve of preserving proper rules, but if those forms are doubtful as to law, we are to construe them in favor of liberty and the people's rights. In Taylor's case Crolius was authorsced to set, and his appointment and swearing in by the Recorder are correct. I dissent from the Chancellor's opinion in that respect. The Montgomery charter has had no influence since the revolution, a law concerning ouths having been passed as early as 1777 or 17 and the Mayor had no excuse for not attending to the evidence Taylor presented of his a pointment as clerk. In regard to Mr. Williams, it is said that Atwill did not have his seat, but that Shaler held over. In the revised charter the hold-over clause is emitted, and was evidently intended to make the duties more conformable to the new constitution. The Aldermen and Assistants are to be elected for one year, and to hold legislative powers in the two boards. Shaler's term of office had expired, but even if the 'old charter had been in existence, Shaler could not hold over, as Atwell was already elected. I shall vote for affirmance, sir, on all the cases.

Senator Funas also presented his views. He said that the mandamus was the proper remedy. It relates to the officer, and his right to be sworn, while quo warranto is connected with the office, to oust a person who improperly holds. There is evidence to show that the Supreme Court has a right to jurisdiction, and that such has been taken away from the Common Council. Without the intervention of the Supreme Court, in the present case, the city might have been left without a government for the succeeding year. It is the election, and not the canvas, which gives authority, and although the law is precise, it will not permit the returning officers, through fraud or inadvertence, to prevent the person elected from having his office. It would not have been proper to order a new election. An election is not intended to show the correctness of a return, and is not necessary. The canvassers of the Sixth Ward were bound to make a return to the best of their ability; they were not called upon to make return as to a riot. A loss of votes cannot defeat an election, unless it can be shown that they would have changed the result, which is not here the case. The Mayor was in error in supposing that there had been no election or was void. That was for a judicial enquiry. He should have actisfed himself beyond the return, as the Supreme Court so done in the relation. He ishould ha presented their views in favor of affirmance and the necessity of considering an election instead of technical national basis on which a ministerial officer should not, and that it was his duty to inquire into the facts of the

The ayes and nays were called, when the vote was unanimous in favor of confirming, being 31 to 0. The Court consists of 37 members, of which the 3 judges of the Supreme Court form a portion, and who have not attended. The three others who did not vote, were Senators Faulkner, Taylor and Varian. The first named was present, but had not heard the argument, and did not vote, senator Taylor and Varian. The first named was present, but had not heard the argument, and did not vote. Senators Taylor as sick, and Mr. Varian had been suddenly called away the day previous to attend upon his father, who is lying at the point of death.

It was then resolved that the first vote should govern the rest of the cases, and thus ended this mighty matter, and that too, without the aid of Col. Webb, or his regular army. The Whigs manifested considerable overpoyous uproystery, but on the whole they bore the "shock of victory" exceedingly well, and deserve some credit. The trouble between Messrs. Smith and Williamson, in relation to the Comptroller, will now, as respects the former, be nullis in bonis.

Fire at Wooster, Onto.—Quite a serious fire occurred at Wooster last week. It originated in Robinson & Jacobs' warehouse, the work it is supposed of an incendiary. E. Quinby's naw warehouse was soon in flames, and thence the fire spread to the small shops and warehouses. The tawesterly course destroyed the stables in the rear in Wolkord's, and the stables and warehouses of the Leban About $4,000 worth of property-destroyed

[Correspondence of the Herald,] Boston, June 26, 1842. Massachusetts Horticultural Society Exhibition The Ladies present - Theatricals.

DEAR BENNETT :-

Yesterday, in company with a friend from Manchester, I attended the annual exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, at their rooms in Tremont street, and well did it repay the walk not only on account of the fragrance of the flowers alone, but the beauty of the ladies with which the exhibition of beautiful women than of dahiias and pacenias, that are only pretty to look upon. In the crowd I noticed the pretty little Miss A. of T. street, in company with a young gentleman, to whom report says she is engaged; also, Miss T, lately returned from a Southern tour; Miss H, of B. street, who eloped with a young midshipman some her father, and the match was thus "broken ofi," as the girls express it. Were you to see this young lady, you would not blame any one for cloping with her. The accomplished Miss C's wese present, in company with their orother. These young ladies are "known the city through, and for twenty miles the country round about" by their loud talking. The Miss K. of H. street, Miss G. of T. street, and many others I-recognized, whose names I cannot now recall to mind.

Among the specimens of fruit, the strawberry naturally attracts the attention first, of which those offered at this exhibition were the largest that I ever saw; and but for a lady standing near them, so strongly scented with musk that I could smell nothing else, I might have formed some idea of their flavor. The largest were those presented by E. Vose of Dorchester, Hobby & Co., and Mr. Bigelow, of Medford—those of the former, I think, are entitled to the preference. Near the strawberries, upon the same table, I noticed several varieties of grapes, from the vines of Dr. John C. Howard, of Woodland, Brookline, which were very large, and of delicious flavor. There were some cherries offered, but of very inferior quality; indeed, I have seen no good cherries this season. Mr. J. F. Allen, of Salem, was on hand with a sample of the finest looking peaches ever raised in Massachusetts, which I found on tasting one of them, with which he presented me, were of the most electious flavor. The ladies seemed to have taken a great fancy to Mr. Allen's peaches, and it was with the greatest difficulty that he forced his way through the crowd in order to present me with a few. Mr. A. will undoubtedly take the highest premium, no other peaches having been offered, save a few from another part of the State of comparatively inferior quality. I noticed also a few cucumbers measuring two feet in length, offered by Col. Perkins. Also, some salad, green peas, and other vegetables not remarkable for their size.

The exhibition of flowers surpassed even the splendid variety that was offered at the last Fair at Nibio's. The largest bouquet was from Winship's gardea, composed of various colored roses, paeonias, &c., and measuring at least eight feet in length, by five in width. The flowers were all large and healthy, and were arranged with much taste.

Mr. John A. Kenwick was also present, with a splendid variety of roses, paeonias, &c. from his garden at Nonamtum Dale, Newtown. Mr. Kenwick deserves great crdit for the pains that he has taken in the improvement of paeonias, and will, doubtless, receive, as he justly merits, the highest premium for the best specimens of that beautiful flower. Upwards of forty varieties of the rose were presented by Mr. P. Wilder, which, though well worthy of premiums, I believe were not offered for that purpose. The assortment of dahlias was small and very inferior; the largest were those offered by A. A. Broadwood. Some line specimens of hardy roses were offered by H. Malon, of Harvard Hill, but were so witted that they had lost much of their beauty. There were many other specimens of roses, pseonias, dahlias, &c., but the crowd of visiters rendered them inaccessible.

My English friend, who has been in this country only a few days, was greatly pleased with the specimens of horticulture that he saw, and acknowledged with a candor rarely to be met with in his country men, that the fruit was much larger and the flowers pretter than any that he had ever seen in his own and related the story of the English nan whose attention was called to a vine of large spots by an American, who asked his friend from abroad, if the bell pears grew to such a size in England, to which the latter replied that they did, and much larger, My friend from the land of John Bull was much larger from from the land of John Bull was much pleased with the story, and remarked that in not true, it was a very good joke.
